OSAKA, CHIEF INDUSTRIAL CENTER OF THE ORIENT, LEFT AFLAME; 450 SUPERFORTRESSES DROP 3275 TONS OF FIRE BOMBS ON WAR PLANTS; STRIKE FROM MARIANAS BASES

Second Fire Raid On The Metropolis Within Past Ten Weeks

FIGHTER ESCORT

Main Targets Industrialized Sector Bordering Harbor

By Gerard R. Himmelbach (U. S. Pacific Cable Editor) Osaka, chief industrial center of the entire Orient, was left aflame today when some 450 American superfortresses dropped 3,275 tons of fire bombs on its important war plants.

Striking from bases in the Marianas Islands, the huge American super-bombers hit Japan's second largest city by daylight. It was the second fire raid on the metropolis, coming some ten weeks after other B-29s destroyed damaged 8-1 square miles of the city in the March 14 fire raid.

Unlike the previous assault, the raiders this morning were escorted by some 150 swift-winged Mustang fighter planes which roared out from bases on Iwo Jima to meet the Superforts en route to the target area.

Japanese broadcasts admitted that fires were started in the raid, which lasted approximately two hours. However, the enemy announcer claimed that the conflagrations—which he said also were touched off at nearby Amagasaki—were practically extinguished within two hours.

The enemy broadcast claimed, moreover, that at least 24 of the B-29s were downed, with another 2 damaged. These Jap propaganda claims, however, were entirely unconfirmed in official U. S. quarters. Continued on Page Two

UP-TO-PRESS-TIME WAR BULLETINS

(By International News Service)

YOKOHAMA 44% DESTROYED OR DAMAGED

Guam—Yokohama was described as 44 per cent destroyed or damaged today and smoke towered nearly six miles above burning Osaka in the wake of an incendiary strike by upwards of 450 Superfortresses.

Even as the American super-bombers were returning from their raid on industrial Osaka, which was hit with more than 3,350 tons of fire bombs, Twenty-first Bomber Command Headquarters disclosed that reconnaissance photographs showed nearly half of Yokohama devastated.

Eight and nine-tenths square miles of Yokohama, second port of Japan and the enemy's fifth largest city, was virtually wiped out, chiefly in the Tuesday raid by between 430 and 500 B-29s. That assault ruined 6.9 square miles, chiefly the principal portion of Yokohama.

At least 20 individual military and industrial targets were burned or destroyed in Tuesday's attack.

1,000 "JAPS" ENSNARED ON OKINAWA

Guam—More than 1,000 Japs were ensnared in a trap of certain death today as the battle for Okinawa—bloodiest of the entire Pacific war—entered its third month. U. S. Tenth Army forces snatched the trap on a force of Japs in embattled Shuri, as other elements of Gen. Simon Bolivar Buckner's command turned to the task of eliminating tattered remnants of the enemy garrison scattered over the southern beaches of the island.

Adm. Nimitz reported that 62,872 of the original estimated enemy strength of 80,000 to 85,000 troops had been eliminated in battle. This figure represented the average daily death of 1,000 Japanese fighting men. Since May 17 the enemy losses have been estimated at 13,500.

Latest United States death toll, including sea as well as land forces, was under 10,000. Japanese losses, thus, have been at least six-to-one over the Americans.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

(Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

Atmospheric Change

Washington, June 1. IN VARIOUS publications there have appeared recently extended reviews of President Truman's "First Forty Days" in office. Almost unanimously these have reflected the feeling that he is functioning in a competent and highly encouraging manner. His Cabinet changes have been commended; his tax views endorsed; his steps toward co-ordination applauded; his reorganization plans approved; his clearheadedness admired.

BUT the principal and most salutary thing achieved has not had quite the attention it deserves. It consists of an atmospheric change about the White House which has been noted by numerous observers, though not recognized for what it is by all. What Mr. Truman has done is practically to clear the air of the hate with which for a long period it had been heavily saturated. The new President seems not to hate anyone very much, and no one—not even Republicans—appears to hate him at all.

IT MAY be that in the course of time he will develop enemies and acquire aversions. It is inevitable that any President serving more than one term should do both. But, certainly, Mr. Roosevelt had more of each than any of his predecessors. Partly that was due to the fact that he had been President longer than anyone else, but partly also to the character of his policies and the flavor of his personality. To be sure, he made friends as well as foes, but he did cherish grudges inordinately and his black list surpassed in bitterness and length any other. During his Administrations there not only was very real hate between the two parties but there was besides intense factional, class and individual bitterness.

IN THIS Administration this hate has largely disappeared. Not only does Mr. Truman seem to have no black list but the terrible antagonism between New Deal and anti-New Deal Democrats has diminished. There has been an increase of tolerance all along the line. How

HOW TO SAVE

How many surplus jobs are there on the Federal payrolls?

By how much has public employment—those whom the Declaration of Independence called "swarms of Officers to harass our People"—and we lump under the word bureaucracy—been inflated under the emergency war powers beyond actual current need?

And how many Federal job-holders should be dropped when peace returns?

Thanks to the Philadelphia Inquirer, these questions are being answered authoritatively.

Through the Inquirer's enterprise, they are being given expert analysis by a man who has devoted years to studying such Federal payroll expenditures.

And lest it be assumed that partisan politics is rearing its ugly head in this matter, it should be added hastily that the expert, far from being a Republican, is an outstanding and life-long Democrat.

He is Senator Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia.

For several months Senator Byrd has been protesting that part of the manpower shortage could be met by dismissing 100,000 surplus Federal employees.

As of the present stage of the war, Senator Byrd places the number of unnecessary job-holders at 300,000.

But the estimate of Senator Byrd which will do the most to hearten American taxpayers—and at the same time strike the most consternation in the hearts of those who would like to see the Democratic Party try to "buy" future elections with Federal jobs—has to do with post-war conditions.

Senator Byrd's exact words are worth reprinting:

"When the war is over, I believe that Federal employment should be stabilized at the September, 1940, level, when there were 1,059,984 employees on the Federal payroll, with average monthly earnings of only $159,800,000. Even with the average 15 per cent increase in salaries as provided by the pending bill, Federal annual payrolls would not exceed $2,250,000,000, a substantial cut from the present annual cost of nearly $7,000,000,000.

To understand the full implications of Senator Byrd's words, it is necessary to remember that Federal job-holding totalled 3,443,192 as of March 31, 1945.

That is to say, Democratic Senator Byrd recommends that 2,373,208 government employees be dismissed as part of the reconversion of the nation to peacetime conditions.

To the "practical" Democratic political thinkers such as National Chairman Hannegan, whose constant emphasis in his public appearances is on patronage, there is a terrifying impact in the suggestion—and from a fellow-Democrat—that the Administration fire two and a third million public employees, most of them party workers, possibly between now and the next national election.

The dilemma with which Senator Byrd confronts President Truman is most interesting.

As a representative of the group in the Senate with which Truman has sought to identify himself, the non-radical Southern bloc, Senator Byrd challenges the President to make good his promises of economy.

Obviously most of the dismissals could be made ef-

CLOSE VOCATIONAL SCHOOLS IN U. S.; BRISTOL INCLUDED

Cut-Back in Training Follows Close on Heels of V-E Day

CLOSING YESTERDAY
5,000 Trained for New Positions Since August, 1940

With a recently issued edict calling for termination of the government supervised vocational schools throughout the United States effective May 31st, the Bristol Vocational School closed its doors yesterday.

The closing of the classes here and elsewhere is in line with the cut-backs noted since V-E day, and the changes in contracts to many industrial firms. The order followed close on the heels of the victory in Europe. Although no definite reason for the culmination of the vocational schools was issued by government agencies, it is stated by local officials in charge of the school that it is believed there are a sufficient number of trained workers to care for war work in the future. The close of the school here closely corresponds with the end of the fiscal year also.

The school locally was originally Moffo had made five jumps in Africa and one in Sicily when he had last written his parents. One jump from 3,000 feet took him beyond the enemy lines, with he and his nine companions requiring eight days to return to their own lines.

DISTRIBUTION FAILURE

Washington is attempting frantically to inaugurate steps to get the meat available to Americans properly distributed. The meat situation in the big cities is critical. Whereas people in rural sections do not have enough red points, housewives in the large cities are unable to find anything to purchase.

The distribution problem has been explained in this way: The federally-inspected slaughterers, who supply the big cities, are processing only two-thirds as much meat as a year ago. There are fewer hogs and sheep on farms and beef cattle are reaching slaughterers in diminishing numbers.

Farmers are killing more steers for home consumption and small slaughtering places which are not federally inspected are stepping up activities. The government is taking 50 per cent of the output of federally inspected plants, compared to 37 per cent a year ago, when the output was larger. The result is that meat available for big city consumers is down 50 per cent compared to the meager supplies of a year ago.

Under private markets this mal-distribution would be taken care of by a pricing system which would elevate quotations in centers of scarcity until meat began to flow to that point. The government is attempting to revise its complicated control structure to channel meat to places where it is not now going. It remains to be seen how much luck officialdom will have in a field in which private enterprise formerly operated satisfactorily.

POSTWAR TRAVEL

A large percentage of the American population will take to wheels or to the air the moment restrictions on travel are removed after the defeat of Japan. For more than three years persons who had to travel endured many hardships. They look forward to days when they can go on pleasure trips de luxe.

Railroad lines are planning to make this possible. Coach designers are exhibiting postwar creations which eclipse all previous conceptions of comfort en route.
New trains will have luxuries and conveniences never before thought possible.

There will be comfortable seats for daytime travel. Movies, dancing, individual radios, telephones, improved dining car service—all this and many other features will make the railroad trip of the future a thing of joy for either long or short trips.

Innumerable revolutionary safety devices have been developed. Shock absorbers will provide smoother riding. Improved brakes will eliminate jerky stops.
Speed will be increased. In short, those who travel by rail after the war will encounter many surprises, all conceived in the interest of their comfort and safety.

An increase of 7,000,000 in the population of the United States since 1940 is additional proof of how wrong the Nazis were in judging this a decadent democracy.

Close Vocational Schools In U. S.; Bristol Included

ly called the Vocational and Educational School for National Defense, the name later becoming Bristol Vocational School. Under the plan there was conducted a training program for war workers, with Bristol Borough school board in charge of the program here. Lester P. Michael, a member of Bristol high school faculty, was director of the school.

The school was opened in Bristol in August, 1940.
Although employees from several firms in this area participated in the program during the early days, the students of recent months had been from Fleetwings, Division of Kaiser Cargo, Inc. A large and more comprehensive program had recently gotten underway.
There were trained at the local school for new positions more than 5000 persons in the past five years.
Supplementary training and upgrading work was taken advantage of by 1000 to 1500 additional.

County School Board Approves New School Plans

quest for the reopening of the prevailing high school attendance areas was postponed until the next meeting. "The citizens in several areas in Bucks County have formerly expressed dissatisfaction with existing small high schools.
The County Board, however, desires to give ample consideration to the problem before revising existing plans. Considerable pressure has been developing for the merging of small high schools with the existing larger high schools rather than the merging of small high schools. Further legislation at the next session is expected to make it more difficult for high schools under 25 pupils to continue. Since 1938, the state has been refusing to approve building plans which would tend to continue the small high school," it was stated.

Walter Garwithen was elected as treasurer of the County Board and Mrs. Grace H. Naylor was re-elected for a four-year term as secretary.

Osaka Left Aflame By 450 Superfortresses

Main targets for the Osaka raiders were the highly industrialized sector bordering the harbor. In this district are concentrated electrical equipment factories, important harbor and communications installations, and aircraft and steel plants.
On Okinawa, meanwhile, the bloody battle for control of that island roared into its third month, as American forces closed a ring of steel on the Jap garrison of Shuri advancing as much as 1,200 yards in some sectors. Despite electrical storms and gale wind, Marines and doughboys joined forces south of the embattled Bas-sion to trap an estimated 1,000 Japs.

Mother is Told She is To Blame for Son's Record

tion with a raid on Stanley's farm on March 18, made by State Police, who say that the Kolakowski place was a fence for stolen drygoods.
The goods, most of which has been recovered and returned to the owners, was valued at approximately $2,300, and was allegedly stolen from 23 stores in Easton, Reading and other nearby cities. Mrs. Kola-kowski, it was testified, would receive the stolen goods and sell them at the Bristol township fence, located two miles south of Langhorne on Durham Road.

Trooper Cutney, of the Langhorne sub-station of State Police, testified that Mrs. Kolakowski, who was born in Poland, has a long police record for shop-lifting, and has served time in a number of jails.
Stanley Kalakowski, who is married and has two small children, told Judge Boyer that he did not know any details as to how his mother conducted the fence.

At the present time Mrs. Kola-kowski is under indictment in Northampton county and a detainer has been lodged against her by the authorities of that county.

"There is very little that can be said in your favor," Judge Boyer said to Mrs. Kolakowski. "You have been in many jails and you have not yet learned your lesson.
It is in your favor that you are willing to 'take the rap' for your son, and the fact that you decided to plead guilty after first wanting to go to trial."

"This was the last case to be disposed of at the May sessions of Bucks County Criminal Court."
